He Tells Strange Stories of Habits of Natives.

Cel. R. C. Benn was giad to set his foot in Wichita again, last evening, and said so at the Santa Fe depot. For six weeks he has been in southern Mexico investisating agricultural conditions for a Chicago firm interested in a business way ing vitality, then its tonic effect is The freight train was going south to a In that country. He taid his grip down on the sidewalk and gave an Engle reporter some interesting incidents of his tripe. "It being my first visit to tropical Mexico," he said, "L mw much that was both new and interesting. My first impressions after entering the republic from El Paso, Texas, were not at all favorable; in fact, after a few hours ride I thought that portion of the universe had been made only for the purpose of holding the equilibrium until the bulance could be gotten into shape. But before I had reached the City of Mexico I changed my views entirely, for I massed through some magnificant asricultural lands that, even with the limited irrigation means employed, were preiding spiens old returns on the labor expended.

From Mexico City I visited the nown of Cuernavasca, about 100 miles north, and valleed through the halls of Cortes Castle, built by the conquerors of Mexico rearly four hundred years ago. Many handsome paintings adorn the walls, and the material used in the construction and the material used in the construction and

The pilot of the engine was completely smashed and the end of a box car was knocked out, besides doing con siderable damage to the other cars of the train, and D. Hule, the conductor of the Sunta Fe train, suffered a severely sprained and bruised ankle.

The Frince train was going north with a box car shead of the engine, and they did not have a man with a light on the car to warn the other train crews. They were working in a foreign yard without orders and knew nothing of the extra freight and pulled right into the track and but for the fact that they were runand but for the fact that they were rin-ning very slow there would have been a very scrious emashup. Neither train was going more than ten miles an hour. Eugineer Kohfield of the Santa Fe said last night: "I was running along slow and could not see the other train. There
